

Little Snow and the Enchanted Forest Dwarfs

Once upon a time, in a kingdom where snowflakes danced like feathers in the air, Queen Ella sat by her ebony-framed window, stitching a quilt. As she worked, she pricked her finger, and three drops of blood fell onto the pure white snow outside. Marveling at the striking contrast, she wished for a child with skin as white as snow, lips as red as blood, and hair as dark as ebony.

Her wish came true when she gave birth to a little girl named Snow White, who was as fair and lovely as daybreak. Sadly, soon after Snow White's birth, Queen Ella passed away.

A year later, King Henry married again. The new queen, Vanessa, was stunning but filled with pride. She owned a magical mirror and often asked, "Mirror, mirror, on the wall, who's the fairest of them all?" The mirror always replied, "You, Queen Vanessa, are the fairest of all."

As Snow White grew, she became ever more beautiful, surpassing even Queen Vanessa in loveliness. When the mirror revealed Snow White as the fairest, the Queen's heart filled with jealousy.

Unable to bear the thought of anyone surpassing her beauty, Queen Vanessa ordered a huntsman to take Snow White into the forest and end her life. But the huntsman, moved by Snow White's innocence and tears, spared her. He told her to flee deep into the forest and never return.

Lost and alone, Snow White stumbled upon a charming little cottage belonging to seven kind dwarfs. They offered her shelter in exchange for help with their household chores. Snow White agreed, finding joy and friendship with the dwarfs.

But Queen Vanessa soon discovered Snow White was still alive. Enraged, she devised cunning plans to eliminate her. First, she disguised herself as an old woman and tricked Snow White with a laced bodice that was too tight. The dwarfs saved Snow White just in time. Then, the Queen tried again with a poisonous comb, but the dwarfs came to the rescue once more.

Finally, Queen Vanessa crafted a poisoned apple. Snow White, deceived by the Queen's disguise, took a bite and fell into a deep sleep that resembled death. The grieving dwarfs placed her in a glass coffin in the forest.

One day, a prince, enchanted by Snow White's beauty, convinced the dwarfs to let him take the coffin to his palace. On the journey, a servant stumbled, causing the piece of poisoned apple to dislodge from Snow White's throat. She awoke, and the prince, overjoyed, asked her to marry him.

The wicked Queen, upon hearing of Snow White's revival and her upcoming wedding, was filled with rage. At the wedding, as punishment for her evil deeds, she was made to dance in red-hot iron shoes until she fell down, lifeless.

Snow White and the prince lived happily ever after, surrounded by the love and laughter of the seven dwarfs, in a kingdom where joy and kindness reigned forevermore.
